HOME CORNER

Lovely Leftovers.

Cold turkey is the term used for heroin addicts when they are withdrawing from their ghastly addiction. Cold turkey need not be as bad as that, but it can be quite dry and tasteless unless used skillfully. Here are a couple of recipes for using up that precious bird in a more exciting way than cold cuts. Very often just a little of the turkey is left and you only need a relatively small quantity for these recipes.

Turkey Tetrazzini.

1 lb. Spaghetti. 1/2 cup sliced mushrooms. 3 tablespoons Margarine. 3 tablespoons flour. 1/2 cup strained Giblet soup. 1/2 cup white wine. 1/2 cup evaporated milk. 1 1/2 cups leftover turkey, cubed. salt and black pepper.

Method.

Cook spaghetti in salted water until tender (15 mins.). Drain and rinse with hot water. Cook mushrooms in butter or margarine for five minutes. Sprinkle with flour; stir, add soup and wine. Cook gently stirring all the time. Add evaporated milk and season. In a greased baking dish put a layer of spaghetti, then a layer of turkey, and a layer of mushroom sauce. Repeat, ending with a top layer of spaghetti. Sprinkle top generously with buttered breadcrumbs mixed with Parmesan cheese. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) until lightly browned and bubbling.

Turkey Croquettes.

6 cups of breadcrumbs. 1/2 cup of celery tops. 3 tablespoons onion finely diced. 1 1/2 cups chopped turkey. 1 tablespoon (teaspoon) salt. 1/2 teaspoon pepper. 1/2 cup white wine. 2 tablespoons melted margarine. 1 egg, beaten.

Method.

Mix ingredients in order given, ending with the beaten egg. Form into croquettes; place on a shallow greased pan; brush with melted margarine. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) for about 25 minutes, or until lightly browned.

Turkey Fricassee.

Normally you use a fresh boiled chicken or turkey for this dish, but you may use leftover poultry with good quality stock equally successful.

3 cups diced Turkey. 3 cups of turkey stock. salt and black pepper. 2 cups white wine. 1 cup button onions. 2 tablespoons parsley. 1 cup button mushrooms. 2 tablespoons butter. 2 tablespoons flour. 2 egg yolks. double cream. croutons of bread, fried in butter.

Method.

Bring the stock with the wine, salt and pepper, onions and a bouquet garni to the boil. Skim and reduce heat. Melt butter in the top of a double saucepan; add flour and mix till smooth. Pour in strained boiled stock and stir over water until boiling. Add sliced mushrooms and simmer gently for 15 minutes. Combine the yolks with juice of 1/2 lemon (and a little double cream) and stir in a little hot sauce. Pour egg and lemon mixture into double saucepan and stir until thick and smooth. Do not allow to boil or it will curdle. Serve the gently heated turkey pieces with the sauce and garnish with parsley and croutons.

"Students out of line"

A summary report published recently by the Department of Labour indicates that if present trends continue there will be a shortage of skilled female workers in the Galway area within a few years.

What emerges rather strongly from the report is that the preferences and expectations of large numbers of students are out of line with the requirements of the labour market as seen by employers. Although the report warns against accepting blindly the estimates of manpower demand as made by employers there is little doubt but that the demands of the market have changed considerably from what they were in the past. Fewer people living in Galway city were employed in building and construction work and in agriculture in 1966 than in 1961 while during the same period employment in services and industry increased.

Comparisons between the Census of 1966 and the previous one of 1961 provided the survey team with much of their basic statistics. These showed an increase of 11% in the population of Galway city.

A comparatively high percentage (60%) of Galway city were in the active age groups (15 to 64 years) compared with that for the state as a whole (58%).

93 firms out of a total of 573 firms which employed 20 or more workers (and over three quarters of the total number of employees) assisted the survey team by completing a detailed questionnaire. One of the main points which showed up in the returns was that only 12 of the 93 firms had had a strike in the five years up to 1967.

From returns completed by schools in Galway city and the surrounding area, the survey team calculated that over one-third of the 1503 pupils who left the school at the end of 1967-68 school year (245 boys and 311 girls) continued into third level education mainly either university, teaching training college or nursing. The rest entered the labour market proper.

The team set out to interview 393 people who were registered unemployed in the city on a specific date in the autumn of 1967 (3.8% of the gainfully occupied). They had interviews with 284 in order to assess the extent to which they might be available for work in the city and found that 84 might be considered unavailable as they were normally engaged in casual work (such as dockers) or had seasonal or temporary jobs, or were on short time.

The report suggests that the level of unemployment remains at a comparative low level.

The survey team notes that an industrial training centre had now been opened by AnCO on the Galway industrial estate, and one of its primary objectives was to enable unemployed workers to be trained.

The survey team suggested that the development of what is called the catchment area, that is, the area within 25 miles of Galway might be furthered by housewives and farmers, especially small farmers who tended to be underemployed, went to work in city, commuting daily from their homes. The added purchasing power they would bring to the community would help not only trade in these areas, but also, possibly, help to develop and modernize agriculture.

However, interviews with more than 400 people selected at random on this area showed that the two groups least in favour of working in the city were farmers and housewives while those most willing to consider working in the city were those already in full-time employment in the catchment area as they were attracted by the better jobs and better money expected there.

THERE YE ARE AGAIN

How's the auld stomach after the Christmas? Did ye do the usual Christmas stuffing until ye couldn't hold anymore? I did God Help me, but sure it only happens once a year and I'm a martyr for Christmas Cake and that's no lie. I suppose I'll get sense yet but I doubt it.

Well, with the end of an old year it is customary to review all that went on etc. etc. for the past twelve months, particularly the highlights. Well, it's hard to know what the highlights of the past year were, but I reckon if a fella were to go into categories, he might make a fist of it. Let's see now, it goes something like this, and mind you these are only my opinions and they only refer to the Ballad and Krak scene at that. Song of the Year "The unquiet grave," Singer Thomas J. Q. Nolan Esq. Tune of the Year, "Lord Inchiquin" player Ide bean, no, ah, Ni Faolain—fiddler. Group of the Year: "Mooney's, Phyllis and Ide" or "The Conneries" as they call themselves. New sound of the year: The Cana Band. Instrumentalist of the year: Martin Rabbitt. Dancers of the year: Celine Hession and her troupe. It is very hard to fill the next category of Session of the year as each of the sessions has its own inimitable atmosphere, for instance for homeliness and relaxation there is nothing to top the Continental Session. For Krak and general enjoyment, The Castle Hotel is the place. The Cellar is the session where you can listen in reasonable comfort while the newly re-opened Fo'castle Ballad Club behind the Coachman is fast settling down to become what it was in the olden days the greatest of them

Thank you

Corrib Centre, Waterside, Galway, 14th December, '70

Dear Sir, I would be grateful if you would allow me space in your columns to express the sincere thanks of the Rehabilitation Institute, Galway to the following who helped make 1970 such a happy year for the many disabled people catered for by the Institute:—

- (1) All Rehabilitation Committees in the County.
- (2) Galway County Board G.A.A. and all the Clubs who helped to organise our annual Churchgate Collection throughout the County.
- (3) The Nurses attached to Galway Regional Hospital and all the schools who helped with our Flag Days.
- (4) Kilcolgan Carnival Committee.
- (5) County Galway Hunt and Pony Club.
- (6) County Galway Creamery Milk Suppliers
- (7) All the businesses who sponsored prizes towards our functions and all those people who helped in any way during 1970.
- (8) Last but not least a sincere thank you to the Press for all their assistance and co-operation in the past year.

May we take this opportunity to wish everybody a Happy and Peaceful New Year.

Yours sincerely,
T. J. Kelly,
